

The Child Death Review Process

The Child Death Review Process (12th February 2010) - To book click on www.kirkleessafeguardingchildren.com

As from the 1st April 2008 the government requires Local Safeguarding Boards to review the deaths of all children, up to the age of 18, in their area. The regulations are outlined in Working Together to Safeguard Children: Chapter 7

The purpose of this awareness session is to give practitioners and managers information about the Child Death Review Process, their role within this and how it fits both locally and nationally.

Outcomes

By the end of the session participants will understand:

- Understand Kirklees Safeguarding Children Boards responsibilities for responding to child deaths
- The child death review process
- Sudden Unexpected Death in Children
- The roles and responsibilities of different professionals and agencies in responding to and learning from child deaths

Target Group - 2, 3 4

For all practitioners and managers that work with children, young people and their families
